

Narration - “March of the Toys”

First presented in the summer of 1991, Christmas on Silver Pond is an imaginative Christmas play, sharing the story of a young girl named Sue Ann, and what happened to her one cold December in the little town of Silver Pond.

In the story, Mr. Appleton, the town baker, gave Sue Ann a gingerbread cookie containing an unusual ingredient—sugar that sparkled when he poured it from the bag. Sue Ann ate the cookie, just before falling asleep, while thinking about the dolls in her room. That night, in a vivid dream, her dolls became real and she danced with them.

Wondering if the sparkle sugar had something to do with it, Sue Ann decided to share a second gingerbread cookie with her friends. They each took a piece, agreeing to eat it just before falling asleep, and to think about the toys in the Toy Shoppe.

That night, the friends all woke up to find themselves in another magical dream, and the toys in the Toy Shoppe had come to life!
